Critics raise concerns at Commerce, By MICHAEL FALCONE, 11/2/09, Politico.com; <http://www.politico.com/news/stories/1109/29002.html>: "Two former high-level managers at IBM and Microsoft are playing key roles in the Obama administration's patent reform efforts, leading critics to question whether their involvement constitutes a breach of the administration's ethics policy. Opponents of the Obama administration's position on patent reform say that David Kappos and Marc Berejka, who recently took top jobs in the Commerce Department, are wielding too much influence over a policy that stands to benefit both of their former companies."
